WHAT IS LEGAL DEPOSIT?

The principle of legal deposit has been well established for nearly four centuries and has great advantages for authors and publishers. Publications deposited with the libraries are made available to registered users, are preserved for the benefit of future generations, and become part of the national heritage.

Legal deposit is the act of depositing published material in designated libraries. Publishers and distributors in the United Kingdom and in Ireland have a legal obligation to deposit published material in the six legal deposit libraries which collectively maintain the national published archive of the British Isles. These are:

- The British Library
- The Bodleian Library, University of Oxford
- Cambridge University Library
- The National Library of Scotland, Edinburgh
- The Library of Trinity College, Dublin
- The National Library of Wales, Aberystwyth

Publishers are obliged to send one copy of each of their publications to the British Library within one month of publication. The other five libraries have the right to claim items. In practice many publishers deposit their publications with all six libraries without waiting for a claim to be made.

WHAT IS IT BASED ON?

In the United Kingdom, the Legal Deposit Libraries Act 2003, and, in Ireland, the Copyright Act of 1963 (to be replaced by similar provisions in the Copyright and Related Rights Act, 2000) make it obligatory for publishers and distributors in the United Kingdom and Ireland to deposit their publications.

WHAT IS INCLUDED?

All printed publications come within the scope of legal deposit. Under the Legal Deposit Libraries Act 2003, electronic publications will also come into scope. This will be effected in due course through secondary legislation which will be introduced incrementally through government Regulations, format by format, as recommended to the Secretary of State by an Advisory Panel. In the meantime, a code of practice exists in the United Kingdom for the voluntary deposit of electronic publications, and also for microform and other non-printed publications. In Ireland, the Copyright and Related Rights Act 2000 proposes to extend legal deposit to electronic formats.

HOW IS INFORMATION ABOUT PUBLICATIONS MADE AVAILABLE?

Publications are recorded in the catalogues of the six legal deposit libraries. The catalogues are accessible on the World Wide Web and will remain essential research tools for generations to come. Most of the books and new serial titles are listed in the British National Bibliography (BNB), which is used by librarians and the book trade for stock selection. All the legal deposit libraries contribute to BNB, which has a world-wide distribution.

WHAT IS A PUBLISHER?

Within the terms of the Legal Deposit Libraries and Copyright Acts, “publisher” is understood to be anyone who issues publications to the public.

WHAT ARE PUBLISHERS REQUIRED TO DEPOSIT?

Items published and distributed in the United Kingdom and in Ireland are liable for deposit. The requirement remains, irrespective of the number of copies in a published edition, the price of individual copies, or the size of the publishing body. Items originally published elsewhere but distributed in the United Kingdom and in Ireland are also liable for deposit.

Every issue of a periodical, journal or newspaper should be deposited. Published maps and sheet music should also be deposited.
