African official publications

The British Library has collections of government publications from most of the countries of the world including those of Africa. For historical reasons our official publications collections are strongest for Anglophone countries, and our collection development policy is to build on these existing holdings.

This guide is arranged in alphabetical order of country. Within each country, the titles are listed alphabetically. Each entry gives details of the shelfmark and the British Library holdings, and includes a brief annotation. Links to government publications freely available online are also included.

Key to shelfmarks

OIS plus Dewey number - Reference work on open access in the Asian & African Studies Reading Room.
OPL plus Dewey number - Reference work on open access in the Social Sciences Reading Room.
SPR MIC etc. - Official publications held on microform in a St Pancras basement.

Nearly all other shelfmarks are for printed official document series which are stored off-site.

GAMBIA

The republic of the Gambia State House online http://www.statehouse.gm has links to the budget and some government policies. See the Department of State for Trade, Industry and Employment website http://www.gambia.gm for trade and economic information. For statistical information, etc., on the country's education system see the Ministry for Basic and Secondary Education site at http://www.edugambia.gm/

The Gambia attained self-government in 1962 and full independence in 1965. It was declared a republic in April 1970 and remained a multi-party democracy until July 1994, when the Armed Forces Provisional Ruling Council took over following a bloodless coup. The constitution of the second Republic of the Gambia was agreed in a national referendum on 8th August 1996 and came into force on 16th January 1997.

The Gambia's unicameral legislature is the National Assembly. It was previously known as the House of Assembly and the House of Representatives.

GHANA

Ghana (formerly the Gold Coast) became independent in 1957. The first President, Kwame Nkrumah, was overthrown in 1966 and power was assumed by a National Liberation Council.

In 1972 the armed forces overthrew the government in a bloodless coup and established a National Redemption Council (NRC) as the main organ of government. In October 1975 the NRC was superseded as the highest legislative and administrative organ by a Supreme Military Council (SMC). Civilian rule, under the auspices of the military, was restored between 1979 and 1981. On December 31st 1981 a further military coup led by Flight Lieutenant Jerry Rawlings resulted in the suspension of the Parliament and its replacement as the supreme legislative authority by the Provisional National Defense Council.

A new constitution was approved in 1992 according to which the head of state is the President, directly elected for a maximum of two four year terms. The President appoints the Cabinet and the Council of State and chairs the National Security Council. The unicameral legislature is known as the Parliament.

NIGERIA

Full independence was achieved by the Federation of Nigeria in 1960 and it became a republic in 1963. The republic was overthrown by a military coup in January 1966. A bloody civil war ensued following the secession of the Eastern Region as Biafra in 1967.

The constitution promulgated in 1979 provided for a National Assembly consisting of the Senate and the House of Representatives. Following a military coup on December 31st 1983, parts of the constitution were modified or suspended and the National Assembly was replaced by a Supreme Military Council. Following another coup in 1985 the Supreme Military Council was renamed the Armed Forces Ruling Council and a Constitution Review Committee was appointed to revise the 1979 constitution. The new constitution promulgated in 1989 made minor revisions to the 1979 document, but the then government was dissolved by another military coup in 1993 and the 1979 constitution was restored. A Provisional Ruling Council took control of the government but civilian rule was restored in 1999.

Under a new constitution promulgated in 1999, legislative powers are vested in a National Assembly comprising an elected Senate and a House of Representatives.

Sierra Leone became independent in 1961. It was declared a republic on April 19th 1971, and a one party state based on the All People's Congress in 1978. The President was elected by delegates of the All People's Congress and there was a House of Representatives. A military coup on 29th April 1992 deposed the president and set up a National Provisional Ruling Council. The NPRC was reconstituted as the Supreme Council of State in July 1992, and the cabinet replaced by a Council of Secretaries. The chairman of the Supreme Council of State was in turn deposed by a further military coup on January 16th 1996. Presidential and Parliamentary elections in Feb.-March 1996 resulted in a new government led by President Kabbah. He was ousted in May 1997 by a group of junior officers. In February 1998 a Nigerian-led intervention force ousted the junta in turn and restored President Kabbah. However civil war broke out again in 1999 and lasted until 2001 when the rebel Revolutionary United Front formally recognised the civil government of President Kabbah.

There is currently a unicameral legislature called the Parliament.

SOMALIA

Somalia government website:
http://www.somaligov.net/

Somaliland government official web site
[Former British Protectorate in North West which declared independence in 1991, but is not recognised by international bodies - N.B.
NOT the Government of Somalia]
http://www.somalilandgov.com/home.htm

Independent website with Somaliland laws, issues of the Somaliland official gazette, etc.:
http://www.somalilandlaw.com/

The Northern part of Somaliland was created as a British Protectorate in 1884. The Southern part belonged to two local rulers who in 1889 accepted Italian protection for their lands. In 1940 Italy invaded British Somaliland but in 1941 the British recaptured the territory as well as occupying Italian Somaliland. After the Second World War British Somaliland reverted to colonial status and ex-Italian Somaliland became the UN Trust Territory of Somaliland, administered by Italy.

The independent Somali Republic came into being on July 1st 1960, following the merger of the British Protectorate and the Italian Trusteeship Territory of Somaliland. On 21st October 1969 Maj.-Gen. Barre took power in a coup. Various insurgent forces opposed the regime and a civil war ensued. The constitution of 1984 made Somalia a one-party state, with an elected President and People’s Assembly. Barre fled on 27th January 1991 but inter factional fighting continued. In Aug. 1992 a new coalition government agreed a UN military presence to back up famine relief efforts. On 11th Dec. 1992 the leaders of the two most prominent warring factions agreed a peace plan under the aegis of the UN and a pact was signed on 15th Jan. 1993. At the end of March, the warring factions agreed to disarm and form a National Transitional Council.
UN forces left the country on March 2nd 1995.

The principal insurgent group in the North of the country, the Somali National Movement, declared the secession of an independent Somaliland Republic on 17th May 1991, based on the territory of the former British Protectorate. The government rejected the secession and launched a campaign to reoccupy the Republic in Jan. 1996.

Peace efforts in Djibouti culminated in July 2000 in the establishment of a power sharing agreement and a national constitution to see Somalia through a three-year transition period. The election of members of Parliament and a civilian government followed in August 2000. However, fighting between the rival factions continued. Warlords and politicians met in 2004 and signed a deal to set up a new parliament, which appointed a new president. In 2005 the government moved from exile in Kenya to Jowhar, north of the capital Mogadishu, but Islamists then gained control of the capital and much of the south, forcing the government back into exile. After years of fighting against Al-Shabab and other Islamist groups by Somali, Ethiopian and Kenyan forces, as well as intervention by an African peacekeeping force (AMISOM), Somalia’s first formal parliament in more than 20 years was sworn in and chose Hassan Sheikh Mohamud as President of the Federal Government of Somalia in September 2012. Somaliland, which has been relatively stable since declaring independence in 1991, has not taken part in this process and has affirmed its independence.
The breakdown of government in Somalia has naturally led to a halt in official publishing.

http://www.gov.za/
Site includes an overview of economic and social conditions in South Africa based on the current South Africa yearbook, speeches and policy statements on key political issues, and links to departmental and agency web sites. There is also an archive of documents including legislative materials (bills, acts and regulations), white and green papers and current consultative documents.

Unwembi's List of South African Government internet sites:

Privately maintained alphabetical list of South African government web sites.

The Union of South Africa was formed in 1910 by the merger of Cape Colony, Natal, the Transvaal and the Orange Free State as a self-governing dominion under the British Crown. Parliament consisted of a Senate and a House of Assembly.

The Senate was abolished in 1980 and the legislature became unicameral until a new constitution, approved in a referendum by white voters in 1983 and in force from Sept. 3rd 1984, created a three-part Parliament consisting of a House of Assembly for Whites, a House of Representatives for the Coloureds and a House of Delegates for the Indians. Africans were without representation.

Following the dismantling of Apartheid, an interim constitution came into force on 27th April 1994. Under it the National Assembly and the Senate formed a Constitutional Assembly with the task of drafting a definitive Constitution. This came into force on 4th February 1997. Under the present constitution Parliament consists of a National Assembly and the National Council of Provinces which replaced the Senate as the upper house.

Swaziland became independent on 6th September 1968. The country is an absolute monarchy. A new constitution, signed by the King in 2005 and introduced in 2006, cemented his rule. Parliament consists of a House of Assembly (part elected, part appointed by the monarch) and a House of Senators (appointed by the monarch and the House of Assembly). Political parties are banned, but illegal parties and trade unions do campaign for greater democracy. There is also a traditional Swazi National Council which advises the King on Swazi law and custom.

TANZANIA

German East Africa was conquered by the allies in the First World War and was subsequently divided between the Portuguese, the Belgians and the British. The country was administered as a League of Nations mandate until 1946 and then as a UN Trusteehip Territory until 9th December 1961. Tanganyika (Tanzania) became independent on that date. On 26th April 1964 Tanganyika, Zanzibar and Pemba combined to form Tanzania.

There is a unicameral National Assembly known as the Bunge.
Includes budget speeches, Acts, government reports, government gazette issues, and other government publications.

UGANDA

Uganda became a British Protectorate in 1894, the province of Buganda being recognised as a separate kingdom under its Kabaka. It was granted internal self-government in 1961 with federal status for Buganda. It became independent in 1962 and a Republic with Dr Milton Obote as President in 1967. Dr Obote was overthrown by General Idi Amin in 1971. Following a period of widespread oppression, General Amin was overthrown in 1979. Dr Obote was restored as President in 1980 but was overthrown in 1985 and replaced by Lt General Yoweri Museveni.

Under the Independence Constitution a unicameral National Assembly replaced the Legislative Council. This arrangement lasted until 1971 when democratic institutions were abolished under the rule of Idi Amin (1971-79). Following the overthrow of Idi Amin there was an Interim Parliament which acted as the Supreme Legislative Body until 1980. This was replaced by the Fourth Parliament which lasted until the government was overthrown in a military coup in 1985. In 1986 the National Resistance Movement under Lt. General Museveni came to power and set up the National Resistance Council. This lasted until 1994 when a Constituent Assembly was established to finalise the new constitution which came into force in 1996. Under this constitution the supreme legislative body is the unicameral Parliament of Uganda, while Museveni has remained as President winning "non-party" elections in 1996 and 2001. Multi-party politics was restored in 2005 and Museveni’s National Resistance Movement won the 2011 election.

ZAMBIA

The main Zambian government website is at http://www.zambia.gov.zm/

The Crown took over the administration of the then Territory of Northern Rhodesia in 1924. The country became part of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland in 1953, but seceded in 1963. It gained full independence in October 1964 and changed its name to Zambia.

Zambia is a multi-party democracy with a directly elected president and unicameral National Assembly. There is also a House of Chiefs with no legislative function. It may consider bills but not block their passage.

ZIMBABWE

Zimbabwe Government web site: http://www.zim.gov.zw/

The territory which is now Zimbabwe was granted the status of a self-governing colony in 1923 under the name of Southern Rhodesia. In 1953 it joined Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland to form the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. When this federation was dissolved on December 31st 1963, Rhodesia reverted to the status of self-governing colony. On 11th December 1965 the white-dominated government under Ian Smith issued a unilateral declaration of independence and remained in power until elections in 1979 and 1980 heralded majority rule and independence as the Republic of Zimbabwe.
The bicameral Parliament consists of the Senate and the House of Assembly.
