1. PARLIAMENTARY PUBLICATIONS

France is a republic governed under the 1958 constitution, which provides for a strong president, directly elected for a five-year term (changed from a seven-year term in 2000). The president has power of appointment of the prime minister, the executive ministers, high civil servants, and judges. The president presides over the council of ministers, is the commander in chief of the armed forces, and has power to dissolve the National Assembly. A premier and cabinet, appointed by the president, are responsible to the National Assembly, but they are subordinate to the president.

The French Parliament exercises legislative power and is made up of two chambers, the National Assembly and the Senate. Members of the two Houses are chosen by two different electoral systems. This ensures that all the diverse components of French society are represented as fairly as possible. Parliament is solely responsible for legislation regarding civil, fiscal, and penal law, electoral law, civil liberties, the budget, and amnesty and labour laws. France is divided into several administrative levels, the most important are: Région (22), Département (96), Canton (app. 4000), and Commune (app. 37500).

This guide focuses on Parliamentary proceedings following the Franco-Prussian War, but we have made brief reference of holdings between the Revolution and 1870. The unicameral Assemblée Nationale functioned from 1871 to 1875. By the Constitutional acts of 1875 legislative powers were then shared by the Chambre des Députés (Chamber of Deputies), elected by direct universal suffrage for four years and the Sénat (Senate), elected by indirect suffrage for nine years. The two houses had extensive powers both in initiating legislation and in supervising the Government, which was accountable to Parliament. After the WW2 the lower chamber was renamed Assemblée Nationale.

Apart from the Parliamentary debates included in the Journal Officiel, the Compte rendu analytique officiel (Official analytical report) is published by the two chambers a few hours after the end of the meeting it concerns. It is a verbatim account about two-thirds the length of the complete version appearing in the JO. The analytiques are the official records until the JO account is published. Each house also publishes another edition of the debates a year or two after the end of a session. These editions which were known as Annales du Sénat: Debats Parlementaires and Annales de l'Assemblée Nationale. Debats Parlementaires were replaced by Comptes rendus des débats du

Senat: and Debats de l'Assemblée Nationale, respectively, in 1950.

The libraries also have separate sets of parliamentary publications as follows:

1.3 Debates and Documents, 1875-

It is a verbatim account about two-thirds the length of the complete version appearing in the Journal Officiel (JO). The analytiques are the official records until the JO account is published.

Each house also formerly published another edition of the debates a year or two after the end of a session. These editions which were known as Annales du Sénat: Debats Parlementaires and Annales de l'Assemblée Nationale. Debats Parlementaires were replaced by Comptes rendus des débats du Sénat: and Debats de l'Assemblée Nationale, respectively, in 1950.

The debates of the National Assembly have been digitised and are available from 1958 at <http://archives.assemblee-nationale.fr/index.asp> .

1.4 Constitution

The Constitution of the Fifth Republic was adopted on October 4, 1958. It replaced that of the Fourth Republic, dating from October 27, 1946. The current Constitution has been amended 18 times, most recently in 2007. The preamble of the constitution recalls the Declaration of the Rights of Man and of the Citizen from 1789 and establishes France as a secular and democratic republic, deriving its sovereignty from the people. It provides for the election of the President and the Parliament, the selection of the Government, and the powers of each and the relations between them.

3. LEGISLATION AND COURT REPORTS

3.1 Legislation

French legislation, including codes, is officially published in the Journal officiel de la République française, which began publication in 1869. Earlier years from 1794 are covered by the Bulletin des lois, which ran on concurrently with the JO until January 1931.

3.2 Court reports

The Supreme Court (la Cour de Cassation) is the highest court in the French judiciary. Civil, commercial, social or criminal cases are first ruled upon by courts of first instance or lower courts (tribunaux d'instance and tribunaux de grande instance, commercial courts and industrial or labour courts (conseils de prud'hommes), etc.). Judicial civil and criminal courts govern disputes among private individuals. Administrative courts govern disputes whenever the state is involved. The Conseil d'Etat is the highest administrative court. Depending on the importance of the dispute concerned, decisions by these courts are made at last instance in small cases or at first instance in the majority of cases. Decisions rendered at last instance may be challenged in a court of appeal, where all aspects of them are re-examined, as to both facts and law. Selected important decisions are now available free on the court web site at <http://www.courdecassation.fr/>

The Supreme Court has published its criminal and civil decisions in two monthly bulletins:

5. NATIONAL BANK

The Banque de France was set up in 1800. As a member of the Eurosystem since 1999 - which functions on a decentralised basis - it contributes to the preparation and implementation of the euro area single monetary policy whose primary objective is price stability. As a national central bank, it ensures the smooth circulation of banknotes and coins, monitors financial markets and oversees payment systems and media and, more generally, financial stability. This same objective of financial stability underpins the Banque de France's tasks at the national level: control and supervision of financial intermediaries; provision of services to banks, businesses and public authorities; analysis of companies' financial situation; protection of individuals in the economic and financial sphere.

7. WEBSITES

This is a selective list of useful sites.

An up-to-date listing of French government, institutions, administration and statistical websites is available at http://signets.bnf.fr/html/categories/c\_351admi\_france.html

The French government has made a concerted effort to provide much official information to its citizens over the Internet. This new government policy has resulted in an explosion in the number of governmental web sites, facilitated by the tradition of centralization. Many of these sites have a part in English. The principal web sites are:

www.service-public.fr/

This gateway provides access to the French civil service information on-line. The site has practical guides classified by theme, a civil service directory and public web sites directory. It contains links to the texts of laws, public reports and job offers in the civil service. It is produced by Documentation Française in association with the Prime Minister's office and the Civil Service and State Reform Ministry.

www.vie-publique.fr/

Provides access to governmental information including public policies for French citizens and official consultations.

www.elysee.fr/accueil/

The President's website contains presentations of various French institutions, and fundamental texts, speeches, and news.

<http://www.elysee.fr/la-presidence/accueil/>

The Prime Minister's website contains governmental information, reports, current awareness services, and links to other ministries.

www.assemblee-nationale.fr/

The National Assembly contains its history, deputies, services, latest sessions and reports. The constitution and some other information are in English.

www.senat.fr/

The Senate has information on the second parliamentary chamber.

www.ladocumentationfrancaise.fr/

Some French official publications can also be found at this site where the complete texts of two years of official reports are provided, with some reports in English.

www.legifrance.gouv.fr/

The French government legal server includes the texts of the Constitution, Codes and much legislation as well as links to the major courts. It contains all laws currently in force, selected regulations, the Journal officiel lois et décrets from 1990, statutes and decrees from 1978, all the official codes, international treaties and agreements, jurisprudence, legal developments, etc. It provides access in English to civil, commercial, penal and other codes.

www.courdecassation.fr/

The French Supreme Court also has a website where selected important decisions in civil, criminal, commercial, and social cases (currently over a hundred) are available free of charge. It also contains annual reports since 1997, as well as the Bulletin d'information de la Cour de cassation (BICC) since April 1995 in full text, and a current awareness part.

Droit.org

8. STATISTICS

The Libraries have an extensive set of French government statistics, backed up by other, non-Governmental statistics collections.

The British Library's collections of foreign government material, including statistics, are stored in Yorkshire. Please contact the Enquiry Desk in the Social Sciences Reading Room for advice on ordering.

In France statistics are produced by a number of organisations. The portal Statistique Publique was created on the request of Conseil national de l'Information statistique or CNIS (National Council for Statistical Information) to enable public access to statistical products of these organisations. CNIS provides a forum for producers and users of public statistics. As coordinator of government statistical activities, it prepares a medium-term programme, and -within that framework- an annual programme incorporating all public surveys.

http://www.statistique-publique.fr/index.php?php\_action=ACCUEIL

<http://www.cnis.fr/>

France's National Institute of Statistics and Economic Studies (Institut National de la Statistique et des Études Économiques: INSEE) collects, produces, analyzes, and disseminates information on the French economy and society. INSEE is responsible for coordinating France's official statistical system. It represents France in European Union institutions and international bodies in charge of statistical harmonization. A majority of its publications is now available online at <http://www.insee.fr/fr/default.asp>. The website provides easy access to main indicators, France in facts and figures and INSEE products and services. Some parts are translated into English.

From 1841 a census was taken every five years (with some exceptions). The nineteenth century censuses were usually called Dénombrement de la population. From 1901 to 1946 there was both a census (recensement) and an enumeration (dénombrement), with the former published by the Statistique Generale de la France or its successor and the latter by the Ministry of the Interior.

In January 2004, the census of France's resident population became annual. A new census method replaces the traditional enumeration conducted every eight or nine years. The 1999 general population census was the last to cover the entire population simultaneously.

From 2004 the results of the census are available online at <http://www.insee.fr/fr/bases-de-donnees/default.asp?page=recensements.htm>
